The Vicar's Monthly Message

More tea Vicar?

As I write this it is that time of the year when there is an abundance of cream teas, delicious cakes to suit every taste, fruit scones and not forgetting of course chocolate cake! All courtesy of a band of dedicated people giving of their time and talents and of course the expense of all those ingredients. The band of people willing to don their "marigolds" to keep the supply of clean cups and plates flowing. Where would we be without this amazing army working tirelessly to raise funds for our churches?

It is important to have the right recipe of course so that our cakes taste really good and others want to try them. In the same way it is important that we have the right recipe to maintain our faith; we all have access to the key ingredient but without adding other elements it can soon become stale. Faith in the Lord Jesus and in his Father, with the power of the Holy Spirit, will strengthen us when we become weary and empower us to keep working for God's Kingdom.

Hospitality is so important, in many of the stories in the Bible, food seems to be involved somewhere along the line. Of course, hospitality is not all about eating, but it is about welcoming and making the other person feel valued and making them feel part of what is going on; sometimes it is as simple as having a chat with someone new over a cup of tea or coffee whilst listening to the person who may not have spoken to anyone all week or simply reaching out to some one we already know who just wants someone to listen to them. I know this is already happening in the Benefice but let me encourage you to keep on doing what you do so well.

Did someone say "more tea Vicar?" Blessings Teresa

News from Norwood Chapel

Dear Friends.

I hope you have had an enjoyable summer. As I sit at my desk writing this article in August, it is raining. My heart is filled with much gratitude, and I think I can hear my garden flowers and shrubs singing! These last few weeks have been warm, and mostly sunny and dry. It's been quite beautiful and certain flowers have prospered with new growth and large blooms. Because we normally get a good bit of rain here, I don't normally rejoice when there's rain. Today is different!

We all know our 'normal' patterns of weather are changing due to the global climate crisis. We should anticipate change in every season, shouldn't we? With that said, the worldwide Church is celebrating the liturgical "Season of Creation" now and this is a time of renewing our relationship with God (specifically as our Creator) and with all of creation. In the midst of the seriousness with the climate crisis, is it possible to "cultivate wonder and gratitude through intimacy with nature?" Oh, I do hope so.

In her book, Earth Our Original Monastery, Christine Valters Paintner writes that Celtic Christianity views there are two sources of divine revelation: the Bible and nature. And that both are needed to receive the fullness of wisdom from above. For example, the seasons can teach us a lot about the cycle of life and its patterns. Think about what each season is known for: spring – new shoots, new growth, the earth waking up from a cold winter; summer - warmth, longer hours of daylight, much growth and maturation; autumn - slowing down, leaves falling, : magazine@washburnwharfemidbenefice.org.uk cooler temps; winter - hibernation, rest, darkness. I trust you can add more descriptions to our four seasons. What can the rhythms of the seasons teach us about our own lives and what our souls need? Do we hear the invitations to our souls? It is time to "blossom," to "ripen," to "let go" and to "rest." In what ways can we just simply be and enjoy the moment in each season and glean the wisdom it offers? In order to experience wonder and awe with nature, we need to take time to simply be . . . to quieten our racing minds and be present in the very moment.

Here's another invitation for you! On Saturday 21st September, our Methodist Circuit is hosting a countryside ramble called "Ramble and Ruminations", where we will reflect and pray as we enjoy a walk. This is an opportunity to enhance our awareness of the Season of Creation. We will meet at 1:30pm in the car park of Baildon Golf Club, Moorgate, Baildon, BD17 5PP. The ramble is approximately 4 miles and is graded easy to moderate which includes 2-3 stiles. After we finish, we'll visit a local spot for refreshments. If you would like to attend, please contact me at shannon.delaureal@methodist.org.uk. Joining together to appreciate the natural beauty of the countryside can enrich and delight the soul. We do hope you can join us! Autumn blessings, =

The Birds in Your Garden

Ivy

For a change this month, I thought I'd write a about Ivy, a plant which seems to be loved and hated in equal measures. Its evergreen, waxy foliage provides shelter for birds to nest and insects to hibernate, and provides food for many caterpillars. It flowers late in the autumn when very little else is in bloom – take a walk past some mature ivy and you'll hear it before you see it: the buzz of wasps, flies, hoverflies and bumblebees, plus the colourful flutter of the odd lateflying butterfly, are all testament to its popularity with pollinators. It even has its own bee – the ivy bee which feeds almost exclusively on its flowers. A nighttime foray may also reward you with the sight of moths such as angle shades feasting on the rich ivy nectar. The holly blue butterfly might, as its name suggests, employ holly for its first generation offspring, but the second brood of caterpillars feed on ivy.

The wildlife attributes of ivy are by no means limited to the feeding resources provided by its flowers. The high fat content of the berries makes them a nutritious food for birds and they are eaten by a range of birds including Song and Mistle Thrushes, Redwings, Blackcaps, Robins, Woodpigeons and Blackbirds, which in return help to spread the seeds in their usual way . Ivy berries finish ripening in early spring, just as other resources have been exhausted a high energy treat.

Ivy is not a parasitic plant and has a separate root system and so absorbs its own nutrients and water as needed. It is only when a tree is naturally weakened and begins to die back that ivy will reach into the thinner crown, so ivy doing particularly well in a tree might indicate that is already struggling, but will not have been the cause of the tree's sickness. It might though, render the tree more vulnerable to wind damage as the added bulk of the ivy increases its resistance during high winds.

All in all, it is a real benefit to wildlife, though it may well need some controlling to keep it where you want it in your garden!

If you have some ivy near you, then why not do a FIT count of insects on it? The UK Pollinator Monitoring Scheme recording season runs the end of September each year. (Just search PoMS)

PoMS) This simple survey collects data on the total number of insects that visit a particular flower, ivy being a target in September, and can be done anywhere, including gardens and parks, in warm, dry weather during daylight hours. Every single count helps make their data more meaningful, and if you can carry out several counts at one location during that time you will be adding

Our next meeting is on 11th September when we will be hearing from author Kath Padgett as she recounts tales from the Yorkshire classrooms of the 1970's. Our Annual Meeting and social evening is on 9th October when we'll share craft successes, sell produce and enjoy a faith supper.

This Earth ... by J Jefferson of Norwood

This earth is a wonderful place to live If we respect the code And share the bounteous plenty As we travel this life's road Gods gifts are many and beautiful, The land, the sea, the air And we leave it for our children, So let us leave it fair.

The sea, with abundant species of fish.

Will feed all hungry man But we must clean pollution up As quickly as we can. The fish cannot live if the sea is thick With oil and plastic waste And we leave it for our children, So lets clean it up with haste

The land will provide the food we need If we treat is as we ought By putting back, the good it gives,

Not taking without thought The fields, the trees, the fruit and flowers

Should evermore be seen And we leave it for our children, So let us leave it green.

To keep the beauty around us Lets treasure what we've got And start to help each other To stop the destructive rot We need to save our wonderful world For the future that is to be And we leave it for our children, So let us leave it free.

How quickly the new seasons come upon us and what a strange year it has been. A cold wet spring, then a heatwave, more cold and strong winds. We certainly have had a bit of everything! Now we can look ahead to the joys of autumn.

Keep hanging baskets and tubs of annuals happy by continuing to deadhead and feed weekly. They will reward you by flowering late into the month. Similarly keep picking sweet peas – once they set seeds their flowering duties will be over.

September is the month to plant spring bulbs such as daffodils, iris and crocuses. You can experiment in pots by layering different bulbs in large pots for a succession of spring colour. Make sure your pots are frost proof. 'Prepared' hyacinths can be planted in indoor pots for a display at Christmas. Keep them in a dark frost free place until the shoots appear before bringing them into the light.

Hedges can safely be cut now if not done already. Lavender should be cut back but only into green growth - the woody bits won't regenerate. Wildflower meadows should be cut down, leaving the seeds to fall for a few days before removing everything. Ponds can also be cleaned now without too much disturbance to wildlife. If you remove pond vegetation, leave it on the side for a while to allow any water creatures to return.

Pick a dry day to harvest main crop potatoes, leaving them on the surface to dry the skins before storing them. Keep checking and remove any that are rotting. Apples too can be harvested this month and stored in single layers with plenty of space between the fruits. Email : magazine@washburnwharfemidbenefice.org.uk

Enjoy all the late flowering and the harvest from the kitchen garden all very satisfying after a year of hard work!
